EXIT

COMMENCEMENT BENEDICTION

You have asked for a few moments of quiet before you leave, so that you might think together, feel together, and be together.

Yet you are uneasy and confused: Who are you? Where do you stand? Where do you stand in a world which so badly lacks communication . . . in a world of organized violence . . . in a world which is being destroyed by its own inhabitants?

You feel deeply: of joy and life . . . of horsing around in the dorm . . . of outfoxing the master . . . of winning big.

You feel deeply: the pain, anguish, and frustration of a Kent State or a Jackson State . . . or the loss of human life . . . whether it be black, white, American, civilian, or enemy.

You are young, idealistic, and alive. You talk in terms of peace, love, hope, and action. You have made a good start and we ask that you may have the strength and the courage to continue in this direction in spite of the pressure imposed upon you by our generation . . . social pressure, and economic pressure.

May you live up to your ideals: ideals of honesty over phoniness, of peace over profit, and of love . . . not an easy love, a love for that which is attractive and easy to love; but a love for the different, the foreign, and the unattractive.

As you stand together in quiet, we hope and pray that each of you will become men of action and not men of apathy.

Amen.

William E. Dubocq

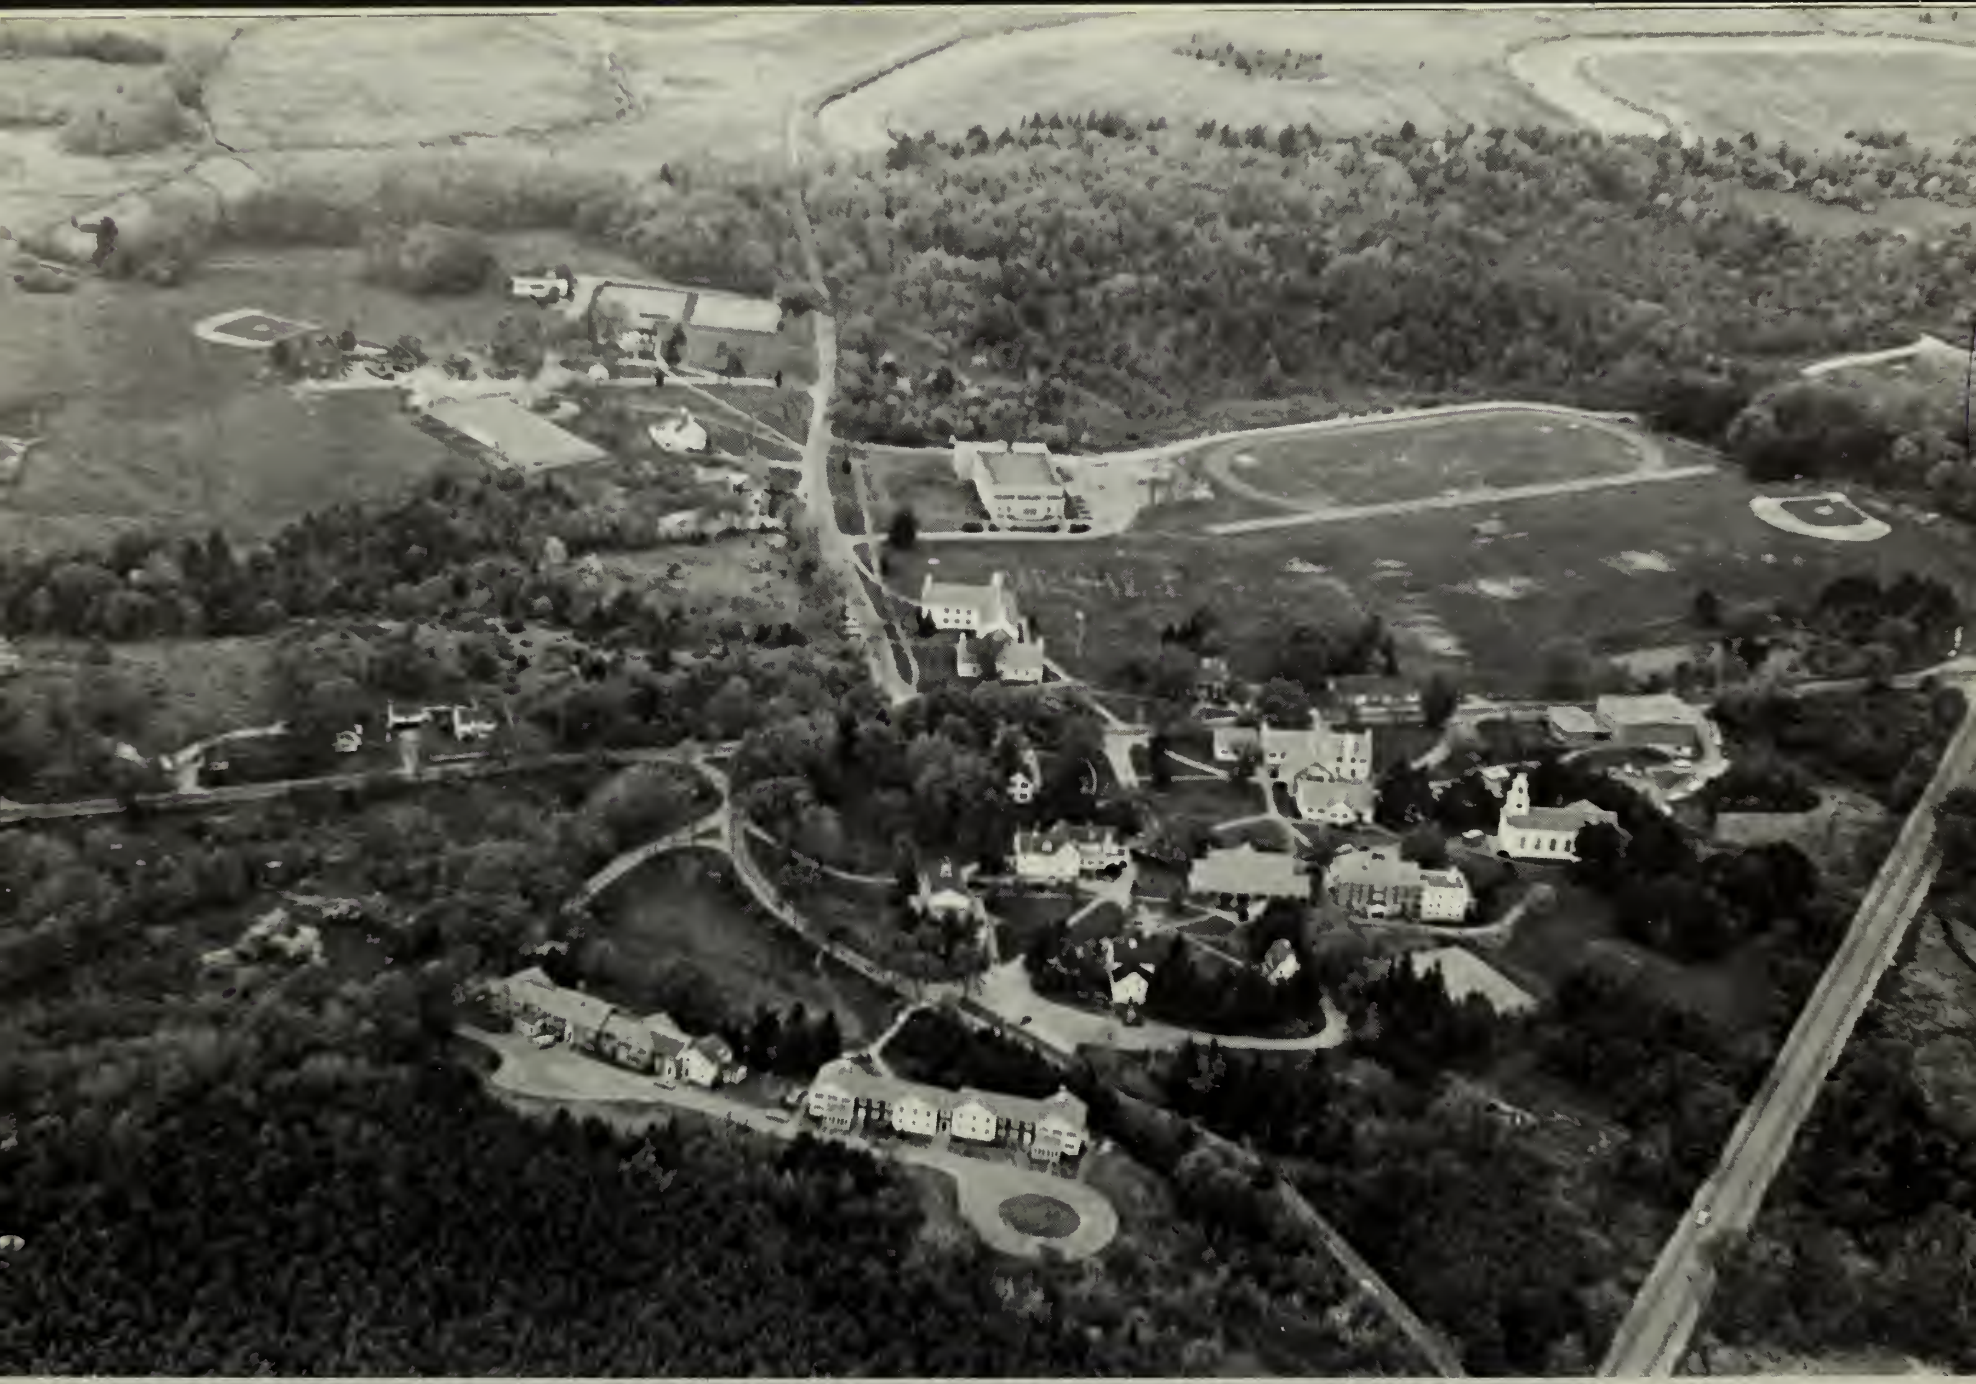
DEDICATION

Henry Adams once wrote: "A teacher affects eternity; he can never tell where his influence stops." These words are particularly applicable to one faculty member who came to Governor Dummer in the summer of 1930. Since that time, as a member of the Old Guard, he has contributed greatly to the development of the school from one of eighty boys and a few buildings to the school we see today. He was largely responsible for the beginning and maintaining of a strong English department, serving as head of the department for over thirty years during one of the longest tenures in the school's history. Perhaps most importantly, he has been the widely beloved "Uncle Tom" to generations of students: a scholarly, demanding, exacting teacher who never lost his light touch; a man genuinely interested in students as people; the possessor of a fresh and original sense of humor which made his teaching so effective. Although he ended his classroom instruction last spring, the memories of such a man are still warm and his influence will not be forgotten.

It is indeed fitting that students dedicate the 1970 Milestone to a man who has dedicated his entire life to students: Mr. Thomas McClary Mercer.

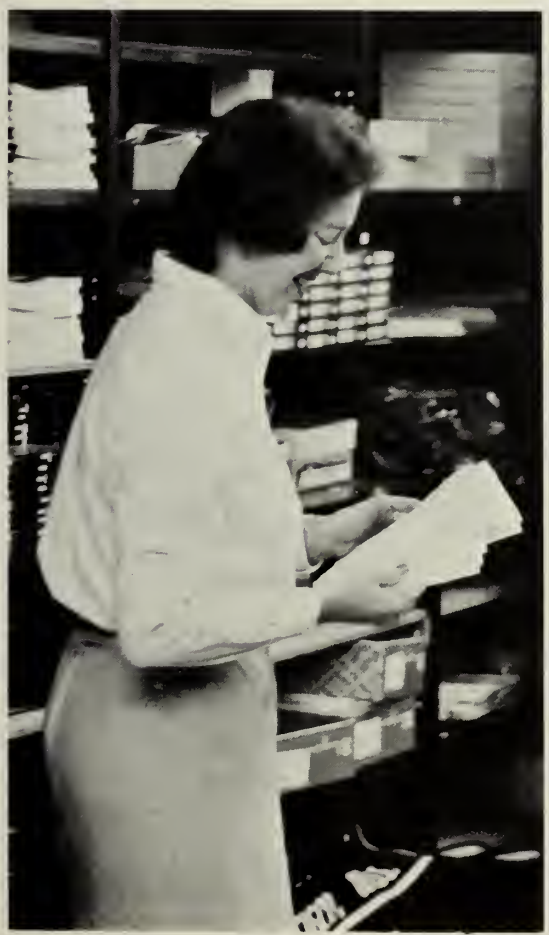


SEPTEMBER

When most of the students returned to school on Wednesday, the football squad had already been here a week, and the soccer and cross-country teams for four days. But even for the team members, school did not start in any real sense until Wednesday. Before then, the campus bore little resemblance to Governor Dummer. Between the pre-season practices and thinking about those practices, one could not help but feel one-dimensional.

But then, all of a sudden, the place was full of people. Thoughts of the returning ran as these: Again—new faces—old faces at different angles—envelope, please—Rules and Procedures – fewer restrictions – greater responsibility – confusion – schedules – unpacking—meetings—plans—assignments—sign-ups—tests—God!

For new boys, Governor Dummer was at first a bewildering mixture of strange buildings with stranger names, and often unfriendly-looking future friends. But the nervousness soon subsided, and school was ready to begin.



5 W

On the first two Saturdays we were tested for academic aptitude and ability to spell. Only freshmen took these tests seriously (of course freshmen take everything that happens to them during the first few weeks seriously). For the rest of the student body, they represented nothing more than a challenge to one's level of tolerance; another annoyance associated with the official school routine. Besides, who knows how to spell "college"?

After the tests we began a new kind of competition with greater relevance: who gets the best looking chick? That night, girls representing the Pingree School came to evaluate the poise and presence of mind of some number of us. These tests were presumably worth the effort.

In their first official game, Varsity Soccer was defeated by Exeter. It was generally thought that the team played well, except for a weakness of offense. Soon afterward the football team was set down by Browne and Nichols. The game remained even until part way through the third quarter when the bottom fell out of the Govie defense.

No one who doesn't play League Soccer really knows much about what goes on in those much whispered-about League battles. And the League Men aren't telling. However, there are those of us who suspect that League Ball is not all that it is cracked-up, or rather put-down, to be. Sports is sports and everyone is out to get a goal, even if he is the goalie.

In any case, the Big League Draft was conducted in the Science Lecture Room, beginning with Commissioner Miller's announcement of the team captains. Soon afterwards, Frank's Freaks, Bill's Bummers, Congdon's Clubbers and James' Jocks (who will be remembered in spirit, if not in pictures) were all a reality.

OCTOBER

The Ipswick River is filthy. About twenty-five Governors, noting this fact, joined a local expedition to aid the cleaning of this stream. They appeared proud of this effort; yes, Virginia, the Govie is basically good at heart.

We all know about the moratorium. The campus was peaceful on that October morning. Everyone was in bed. A few students and a fair number of faculty members did attend Messieurs Sperry and William's lectures on Vietnam. Among these, an active discussion evolved; otherwise, things were quiet.

On Parent's Day, the folks came to see what was cooking at the Academy. Teachers were presumably tactful in their reports, and the football team won its only victory all year. The parents seemed satisfied. The next day, students left on a mission reminiscent of the Ipswich River cleanup. They went to Crane's Beach and did some cleaning up of their own.

Everyone knows that life is a lacrosse game, but in October, an elderly soccer team, a youth infested football team, and a cross-country troupee defied reality. A long month with over twenty games gave G.D.A. teams an experience in athletics.

The G.D.A. student may not think of himself as a renaissance man, indeed he is not. However, the humanities program has supplied evidence that, given the opportunity and the slightest encouragement, most of the boys here are more than willing to incorporate into their schedules events of the type generally characterized as cultural. Beginning with the expedition to see Adaptation Next, nearly every Thursday evening saw buses leaving for Boston's theatres and concert halls. Students also ventured on their own weekends, or with masters, to hear rock groups at the Boston Garden and the Boston Tea Party.

On-campus clubs progressed well. For example, the Photography Club redid the darkroom and put a bed in for Terry Nolan. It did have a setback when some chemicals disappeared and the darkroom was closed. Other clubs, well stocked with their supplies, continued.

The deal is this: when the kids come to the door, they ask for candy: "Trick or treat" they say. If they get what they ask for, they go away quietly. But if refused, they inflict the most horrible of pranks. The new improved G.D.A. way of doing it is this: a bunch of kids (who can tell how serious or sincere they are) walk about campus singing "Give Peace a Chance". They encounter a group of juniors. This group proceeds merrily to dowse their elders with a water or a shaving cream bath; and also suggestions concerning what would be more fun than walzing around campus singing monotonous ballads full of hackneyed moral allusions.

At the traditional Halloween banquet things were a lot less meaningful and more fun. Mr. Ogden made his debut as Myra Breckinridge and Pete Eshelman appeared "sans vetements". Bill Murray made like Lloyd Bridges but nobody noticed that Bill was simply unveiling a new ensemble from Krackerjacks. People did notice that Ron Latham looked remarkably like a laundry bag.

NOVEMBER

November was the concluding month of the Fall Sports. St. Marks won in football 34-0, but our soccer team beat Middlesex 3-1. Cross country, the only victorious team against Belmont Hill, finished the season with the best record in G.D.A. history.

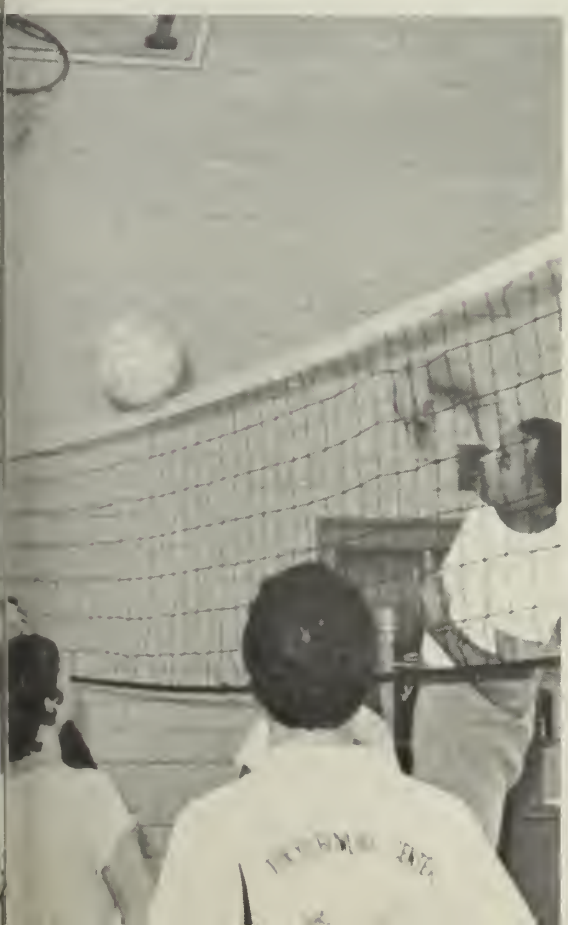
The Scholastic Aptitude Test and the Fall Dance fell on the first of November. To seniors, the SATs were a grim reminder that the dive for a seat of higher learning is not far off. Perhaps the most interesting aspect of these tests is the phenomenon of the instant genius. Every year, at least one boy, who has been more or less universally recognized as a dolt, receives astoundingly high marks on these tests. Of course, everyone is then convinced that this fellow has, within the recesses of his cranium, the intellectual resources of an Nobel Laureate. From that point on, though treated with no more respect than before, this sudden prodigy is nonetheless thought of in the oddest of terms. Should he hand in a mostly blank sheet of paper at the end of an exam, it is presumed that he wrote nothing because somehow the depth of his thought defied erudition. Should he trip clumsily over a rock, it must be because he was at the time buried in philosophical speculation. What is true, of course, is that this chap happens to be unusually apt at the taking of aptitude tests. So much for the big bad SATs. An unfortunate point of scheduling had, as previously mentioned, the Fall Dance the evening of the tests – no doubt a diverting factor, right Jeb?

Let it never be said that at the Academy we don't take our volleyball seriously. This year's championship game matched Hamblet's Hee-Haws and Anderson's Advocates. Leaping and swatting with the resolve of the Japanese woman's national team, the Hee-Haws came out on top and were crowned school. and it is presumed, North American Champions. Suspieion of team rigging arose when a star Hee-Hawer had to leave the game, the elastic band having come undone from his forehead, and his right eye snapped back up into its naturally slanty position. Happily, all of this jealous bickering gave way to sineere congratulations at the game's end. (Some thought it would have been even nicer had the teams congratulated each other.)

On the fourteenth of November, many of those who had participated in the first Vietnam Peace Day, responded to the call of national anti-war leaders and held a special church service in memory of the war dead. The following day, girls from Walnut Hill came to spend the day. There were discussion groups but generally little produetive discussion. What the boys and their dates had to say to each other was, no doubt, more easily said that evening to Mac Smith's accompaniment. Some things are changing at the Academy, but others . . .

INN



There was no turning back now. For seniors especially, the work done during the first term was of great consequence; many had already made decisions concerning college, and the degree of each boy's success in the first months of school were important to these plans.

It would seem appropriate, at this point, to suggest a general sigh of relief coming from the student body after having pushed hard, in sports and academics, for three months without a break. Appropriate it may seem, but truthful . . . no. For those who really "put out" this fall, the coming of Thanksgiving vacation was only a breather. For these people, effort was a great deal more than a form of expediency. They had come to understand the value of self-discipline and the rewards of perseverance; to many, mostly those who had not yet had this experience themselves, these phrases were only empty rhetoric. But for those who had made the effort, the past three months had been worthwhile.

DECEMBER

On January 28 the hockey team lost 3-2 to Middlesex at Concord. The game remained close throughout, with both teams shooting and checking well despite the stuffy air of the enclosed rink. Neither team scored until the middle of the second period when Wil Phippen succeeded with a slapshot from just inside the blue line. Middlesex responded with their best offensive pressure and kept Jim Alles quite busy. The third period saw a Middlesex score followed by a well placed goal by Mike Fish at twenty paces. Middlesex then became uneasy and with several minutes to go they pulled their goalie, scored, and tied the game. Several minutes later they scored again in sudden death overtime to win. Both Coach Blair and the Middlesex coach praised Jim Alles' goal tending (57 saves), the hustle of the forwards, and the defensive play of Pete Briggs and Wil Phippen. Personal and team efforts like those helped to brighten a somewhat disheartening season.

The Friday night cartoons provided a welcome relief to a physically weary, mentally worn out, psychologically spent, and generally lazy student population. The show began with In the Days of the Painter, and was applauded with rustling candy wrappers and viewed by curious students who were trying to figure out what it was all about. Next was The Whole, a cartoon with disturbing contemporary parallels but interesting music. Last and best was the Road-Runner series. Unencumbered with allegorical implications or complicated plots, these cartoons seemed to fit the student mood exactly. They were watched with warm enthusiasm (even the serious smiled) and no one felt the least bit sorry for the coyote. Those who felt sorry for themselves after the show had another chance the next night with Yellow Submarine.

DRUGS

Mention the phrase "Christmas dinner" to a G.D.A. student and the following will probably dance through his head: Bill Murray (in white tux and silk gloves, holding a menu and smiling sincerely), senior waiters scurrying about in red dinner jackets, tables lit by candles and furnished with roast duck and roast beef, rapidly disappearing punch and hor d'oeurves in the Cobb room, Dennett Buettner's piano in the center of the dining hall, Mr. James' "Tannenbaum," the waiters' "Twelve Days of Christmas", and the long hours of the Kitchen Crew. It was indeed a unique affair and was considered by many to be a tribute to the senior class.

Howie Comis carried a sign saying "Enjoy your traditional white X-mas" in an effort to remind school members of the people who could not have such a celebration. Some were offended by what they deemed to be racial overtones; many simply dismissed his protest, and others applauded what they felt to be a necessary addition to the Christmas Dinner.

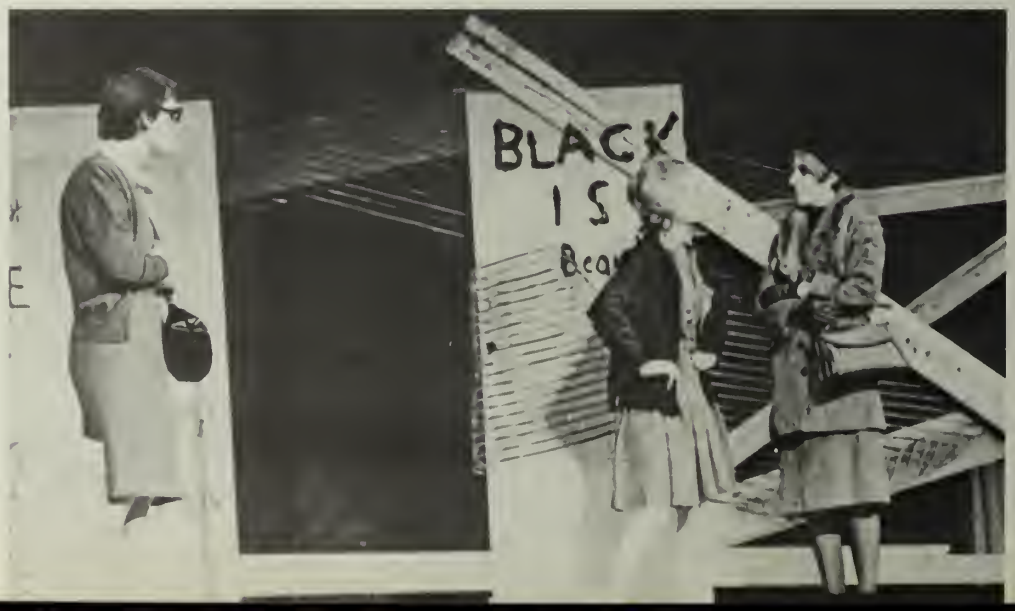
JANUARY

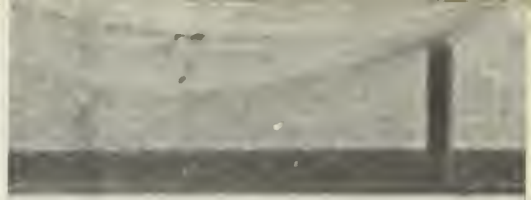
When asked whether or not life was like a lacrosse game, one humanitarian replied "I propose that life more closely resembles our Humanities Program." But what happened to the dilettante, the era of the brag sheet, and the age of the suburban country club? With the exception of a few organized clubs (the dramatics, art, and Glee clubs), group activities gave way to a more personal approach: the free term or independent work project. Instead of juggling two or three "outside" activities, students turned their efforts to specific areas of interest. Suitable subjects proved to be computer science, astronomy, and modern literature. Some made the inevitable studies into advanced sleeping and passage of time; but for others, the free term provided a chance to pursue individual interests which the clubs had not offered.

Bob Lighton appeared at the dining hall microphone on February 13 and made a plea for school support at the basketball game with Milton. At 7:00 the gym was nearly full with students. However. nearly everyone overcame his shock and began to show an enthusiasm reminiscent of the spectators at Chris Barker's final bout in the wrestling Interscholastics two years before. The Milton game began in a normal manner, with the team displaying the unity which it was gradually developing. It soon became obvious that the contest would be unique when this unity expanded to include the audience. A rapport grew between students and team members in which the spectators were excited by the players' skill and the players began to respond to the spectators' expectations. At the end of the game it was difficult to discern which of the two was more exhilerated, but it was well known that the 76-66 win included four men who scored in double figures. This success did not always accompany the basketball team, but the Milton game did show what could be done with hard work and school support.

On January 15, 1970, members of the Black Brotherhood conducted a service in memory of the late Dr. Martin Luther King. All black students helped to create and direct a ceremony centered around the hardships of Dr. King's life and the black struggle for equality. It included a quote from Dr. King, a poem by Langston Hughes, and a recorded song. The next night a second ceremony was held and a reading from Chaos or Community: Where do We Go from Here was added to the program. Some of those who attended felt that the service was too long or had too much music. Black students agreed that the purpose was to satisfy the needs and wants of blacks to honor black heros. The service was made open for all students interested in sharing this experience. Others chose to see the movie "Z" or "Hello Dolly". The first was reported, and the second was assumed, to be good.

It has been said that "the philosophy behind the Dramatics Club this year has been to do extensive work in all aspects of the theatre: directing, acting, and all technical fields with hopes of eventual student control." (Jaffe, Bob, Dramatics Club, Byfield, 1970). The club has been quite successful in pursuing these goals. The fall season opened with The Curve, directed by co-advisor Gerald Kenjorski. The winter saw the three student directed plays, The Feast, The Sandbox, and Pigeons; and finally the full length production, Mr. Roberts, directed by co-advisor John Boynton. These plays helped to create an "esprit de corps" among members and also helped to better equip the club. For everyone else they provided entertainment of a semi-professional nature, and Bill Connolly as grandmother.





FEBRUARY

On the second of February the groundhog made his annual tour of inspection, but, because it was Monday morning, few people really cared. The minds of most students were lost on the weekend just passed, or the paper which was due next period, or the game coming up, or just lost. There were some things to brighten up the winter weeks; for example, the prospect of winter weekend, the jazz concert, or the Valentine's Day talent show. Others could look forward to the challenges of League Basketball and Badminton. But for most it was a typical winter day, with everyone looking for his own shadow.

Griping is a winter word. Inevitably one of the prime targets is the Sunday morning "rap" with God: Church. In the past students have sometimes expressed their sentiments by making the church a bedroom, dining room, or airplane factory. This year has seen constructive criticism resulting in a liberalized format and a greater feeling of the relevance of religion. For example: the four girls from Walnut Hill who spoke on unity and brotherhood, Mr. Harvard's presentation of love, Mr. Wilkie's and Mr. Mercer's sermons on communication, Jeb Bradley's speech on pseudo-liberalism, and Jack Cutler's talk on charity. Perhaps most effective were Mr. Dubocq's explanations of Biblical problems today: misunderstanding, apathy, and personal sacrifice. Those who made it past the bathroom, dining room, and drifts of snow found a personal experience to be had.

Somewhere out by the Byfield Parish Church or far beyond the Marshes of the Parker River, on a cold and cloudy February afternoon, one might well have seen a Lone Grey Figure plodding along in seeming aimlessness. (This part can be skipped by non-trackmen). But be not deceived, for the Figure plus eighteen other trackmen had the definite purpose of preparing for the Interscholastics. And prepare they did, for the impressive mileage, blisters, and soreness ended in some of the best winter track results ever seen. A majority of competitors set personal records; co-captain Latham stole the limelight with a win in the 600 and a school record in the 1000; and G.D.A. placed second out of eight teams. The meet provided an encouraging and unusual opportunity for the team's hard work to produce results.

Few people really enjoy thc winter term. Its value is more clearly seen in retrospcet than it is during the long and snowy weeks. Winter forms a logical consequence to the fall term, where the interest and determination aroused in the fall is tested over a long span of concentration. The challenge is to maintain the drivc begun in the fall until it becomes well tempered and can then peak in the spring. Such an attempt naturally produces discontent and depression, and by the cnd of the term one usually sees a charaeteristic staleness. However, for those who have made the cffort, this staleness is overshadowed by the realization that one can do it, even in the winter.

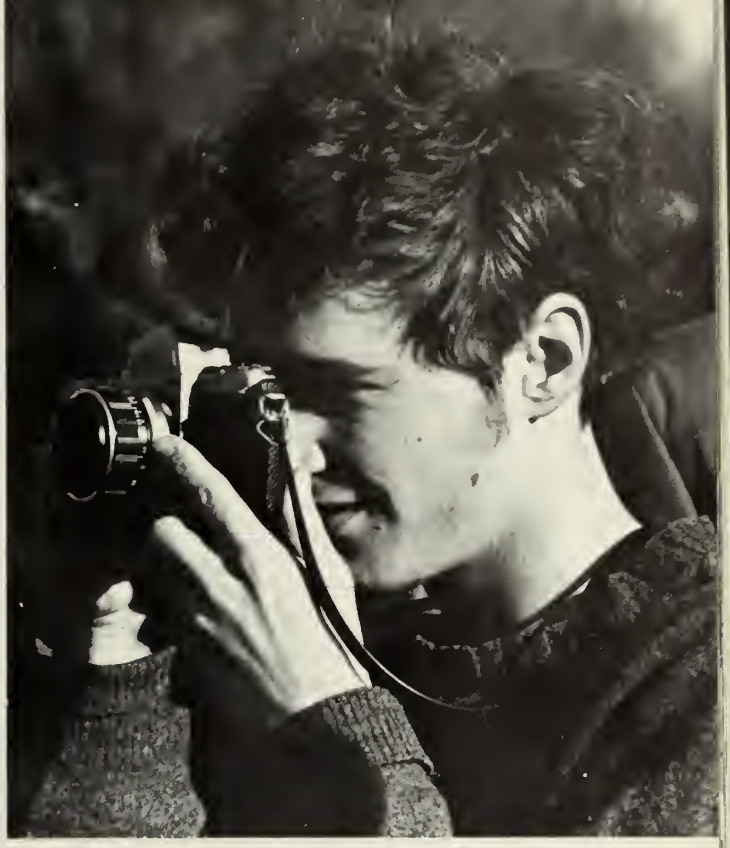
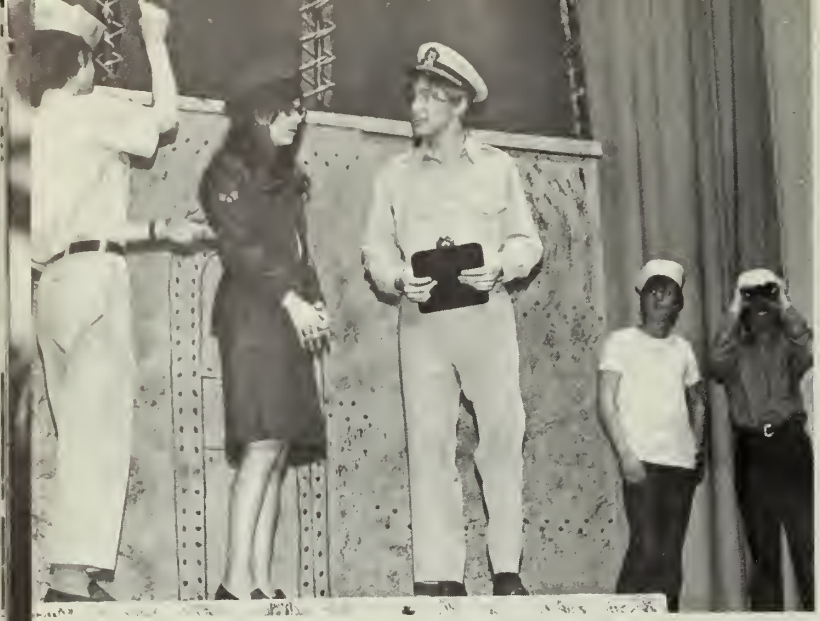
MARCH



With Socrates' concept "the unexamined life is not worth living" firmly entrenched in everyone's mind, the Governor Dummer Community underwent a two day self evaluation, in preparation for the formal evaluation in the spring. Maybe our life is not worth living, after all. In order to promote stimulating discussion, the dress code was abolished (only to be re-instated once evaluation was over and forgotten). Dedicated to the art of complaining, students finally talked to the faculty on equal terms . . . "But, Mr. Sperry, if only we didn't have to study this horrid junk." Some faculty members even managed to put in a few words . . . "I couldn't agree with you more . . ." The success of the evaluation was not the changes that were immediately instituted, but rather the fact that the concept of change was discussed. Students, Faculty, and Administration began to look honestly at our school and find that some benefit was to be had by all who attended, and the function may become an annual affair.

The Interscholastics ended a wrestling season marked by a general trend of improvement. Even after losing several key players Mr. Evans was able to build the fairly strong team which went to Andover. The meet itself was disappointing, although not unexpectedly so. Charlie Bouchard, Dana Fisher, puppy dog Mulligan, and Jon Imber all mixed wins and losses in each of their three bouts, with Fisher winning a fifth in the consolation finals. Co-captain Billy Bod Tobey, after a 4–2 decision in a troublesome match, got a fall in the second and controlled Biddle of Andover in the final to become champion. Second co-captain Twig Stichnoth also became a champion by winning his first round in 1:45, winning a dangerously close second round by points, and then quieting the Andover benches in the finals with a series of endless and somewhat humiliating takedowns on Andover's Lacey. The remaining matches were not nearly as encouraging: Steve Worth suffered two disappointing losses, Butch Doyle was still bothered by a pulled shoulder he had been favoring all season, Bar came back for a fifth in the consolation finals, Marty Hillsgrove wrestled with a twenty pound handicap, and Duffer Gay was defeated in two well wrestled matches. However, all was not lost. After the generally disappointing first round Mr. Evans read from his well thumbed Winnie the Pooh, and, much of the nervousness subsided, the team resounded with an encouraging second round.



Dorm life is fun. Ha-Ha. Struggling out of bed sometime around 7:00, that is if the Leavitt's cat doesn't wake you up at 3:00. "Meeeeooow!" "Get that @!!& cat out of this building!" Or going to bed at four drugged with coffee, No-Doz, Vivarin, and . . . Oh yes, the cat. The corridor serves as a combination of a miniature golf-course and Richie Martin's baseball field. And of course there's Ingham: the demolition squad. "We've got to let out our pent-up emotions somehow."

All kidding aside, dorm life breeds self-discipline. All of Pierce III was put on probation for smoking. Oh well, we all have our faults. Crash! Smash! Bang! Owww! (sorry about that!) Kablaam! "Oh. Hello Mr. Downes." Excuse me. I was thinking about Ingham again. Self-discipline? Yes, it's there somewhere, beneath all that facade. In fact, there may even be some good in dorm life . . . at least we all go through it together.

The key to communal living is trust and brotherly love – That's why there are locks on every door in Eames and major rules prohibiting fighting (a little insurance for harmony.)

Seriously, senior year everyone pretty much knows everyone else, and has to learn enough about dorm life to force things to run smoothly – smooth even up to three in the morning. Someone wants to go to bed, so someone spits his tongue out; someone wants to go to the grill, so someone steals someone else's bike; someone has nothing to do, so someone gets lost in the woods . . . And Mr. Sperry, Mr. Williams, Mr. Leavitt, and Mr. Kenjorski play "Father Knows Best." It's a losing battle; boys will be boys, but seniors are seniors and know too much for their own good. What they need is a good pat on the old can.

APRIL

Anyone who doubts the success of the spring athletic season must have missed Mr. Evan's Broken Bridge Award to the sophomores in Perkins and Al Winfrey's presentation of autographed basketball sneakers to Mr. Sperry. Nevertheless, life's lacrosse team completed a respectable 7–4 season, including difficult victories over Exeter and St. Pauls and also some outstanding individual play. The Track team maintained a 500 season (including some inevitable losses) until the Hebron meet, where they lost by one point. The baseball team finished a 6–8 season marked by remarkable unity with a strong win over the alumni. Finally, the tennis team ended with a fine 5–3 record based on the play of Bob Leighton and Bill Frost, and on ample depth; while Golf's record consisted on an individual basis of 30 wins, 14 losses, and 2 ties, including 7 losses to a very strong Harvard freshman team.

The first night of the Beethoven Festival was dedicated to the genius of Rudolph Serkin. On this night, there was genuine brilliance in the playing of the cherub-like pianist, and the audience's response was one of joyous appreciation. Two nights later we returned to Symphony Hall to hear Beethoven's Ninth and to view Leonard Bernstein. Bernstein lept, swept, flung his tawny mane and obstructed our view of an attractive girl in the front row of the chorus. At the finale, Symphony Hall rocked with heart-felt approval of Boston-raised Lennie, Beethoven's titanic work, and the symphony, chorus, and soloists. The predominant silence of the Govie Van on the return trips reflected the genuine intensity of the impression made.

You always know what they're thinking: twenty-two young men in a row with no females (very interesting). So, you purposely walk into the theatre alone and late, in hopes that no one will know you're part of the group. At Hair everyone was foiled in the spirit of things. You couldn't ignore the situation when one of the actors winked his eye and commented on how cute the two solid rows of males were. The evening was off, and the theatre revolution was beginning. Of course the music was fantastic, but more important was the rapport created between the actors and the audience. Even if some of the actors bordered on being crude, the audience was part of what was going on – youth reawakening – or they were wishing they were thirty years younger.

"Vermin! Do be sure to wear gloves and cover your mouth and nose if you're picking up trash."

"Yah, well . . . right, Mom."

In spite of outside pressure, April 22 was labeled Ecology Action day at G.D.A., and classes were suspended. Organized by Jeb Bradley, Jack Cutler, and Nick Meyer, the day started with a two hour forum on the hows, whys, and resolutions of the crisis. Of the three speakers, Jeb Bradley concerned himself with facts about the present crisis, and the two guest speakers dealt with future developments and resolutions and with a historical appraisal of the polluter's psychology. The afternoon was one trash marathon. Two busses and assorted campus vehicles spread the entire student body over the Newburyport area for an intensely real look at pollution. Dozens of truck loads of trash were removed, but too much was left undone: a universal ecological truth.

Everyone knows, or should be able to imagine, how people act when they receive very good or bad news. And so no one was greatly surprised at the scene which transpired on April 20th in the mail room, when some of the larger colleges responded to our pleas for acceptance. In the olden days only one type of remark was heard following this great adventure. It was a variation on: "Hello Max, and what Harvard are you going to next year?"

This year, however, a new and tintillating spirit has arisen among seniors and the question asked now is: "Good evening, Max. By the way, are you going to college next year?" And a response might be:

"No, Louis, as a matter of fact I'm taking a year off to discover myself. My father says if I haven't found myself after a year, he's going to claim me as a loss on his insurance property and use the money to rent a Korean kid to send to Princeton in my place." Yes, the only ones who seem to have retained their old and perverted view toward the game of college admissions is the faculty, one member of which was caught in the act of crawling out of a mailbag with his college letter sweater and freshman beany in evidence. Said he, between choruses of 'Pestolozzi Frobel Teachers College, Tis thee I Love Most'. "So far, three into the Old Pest, and two more on the waiting list. I always knew this class had what it takes."

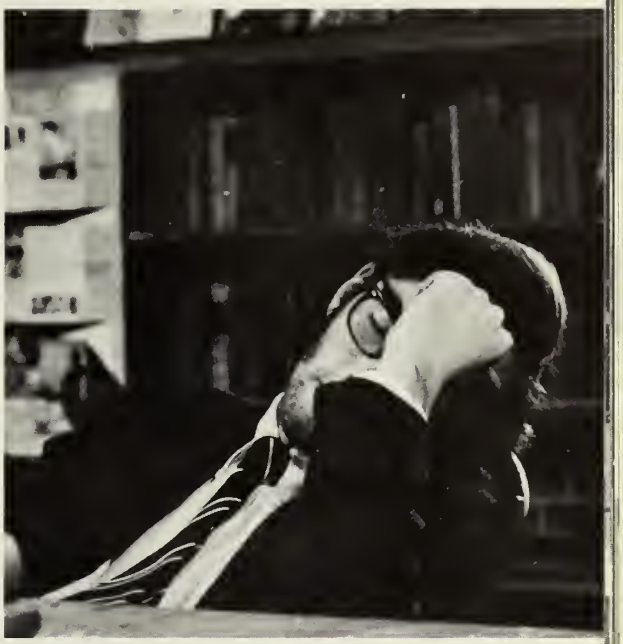
The spring is always a difficult time for concentration, and this fact is particularly true for athletics. The freshness of the fall and the intensity of the winter seem to give way to a general relaxation in the final term. This trend is due partly to the change in weather, partly to the imminence of the summer break, and partly to the fact that man is season dependent. Another notable trend is the fact that sports are playing a less significant role at G.D.A. It seems likely, however, that this decrease in importance is due largely to the decrease in the number of interested people. For the people who did participate, sports retained much of their value. As Mr. Murphy pointed out at the awards ceremony, Plato once stressed the need for music and gymnastic, the education of both the mind and the body, and athletics fulfills the equally important second part. Moreover, athletics can afford an unusual sense of accomplishment; not in proving oneself to be a man, but in proving oneself (to oneself) of being able to recognize, pursue, and attain a goal, particularly one which necessitates cooperation with others. This feeling is perhaps best achieved in the spring, if one can put aside the spring fever for long enough to make oneself hurt enough to accomplish something worthwhile. To paraphrase Aeschylus: justice so moves that wisdom (and perhaps accomplishment) comes along through suffering.

G.D.A. political activity throughout the year had included aid to the election of Mike Harrington, the November 15 Moratorium, and the chapel services held in the middle of each of the fall and winter months for the men killed in Indochina. The week of April 15 marked a significant rise in activity once again. A two day liquid fast was organized, as well as a small student strike in which the students participating accepted the consequences of missing classes. Also on that day some one hundred students were bussed into Boston for a rally on the Boston Common. One week later on April 22 was the Ecology Teach-In, which consisted of speeches in the morning concerning our environment, and a clean-up of various areas of Newburyport in the afternoon. A campaign was established for collecting all newspapers and soda cans in the school, so that they could be returned and reused. The political year ended with a silent vigil in May for all those killed in the Indochina War, followed by a rally in Newburyport at night. After that event, the heads of the Moratorium committee started a petition canvassing of downtown Newburyport, trying to get the question of the war put on the ballot in November's election. The several trips into Newburyport culminated in a door-to-door petition canvass of the city on May 30.



If asked how many students actually worked during the last month of school, one would have to say few of them – only the real students can work. A great majority of the others, the artists, dramatists, photographers, and musicians, spent the last four weeks preparing outstanding programs to climax the year. Variety was the key. The "Mercenaries" (both Art Club members and studio art students) filled two shows with as fine a diversity of material as has ever been displayed by students. Mr. and Mrs. Blair hosted the band, the jazz group, and the music students for an evening of equally diverse and enjoyable music. While filling a photography show as well as a dozen pages in Spire, the photography club, headed by Mr. Reid, experimented with more unusual development techniques as well as more exotic subjects. Finally, the drama club shifted from the light drama of Mr. Roberts to the tragic intensity of Oedipus Rex. The performance was exceptional; due not only to the fine acting but also to the concerted effort Mr. Boynton put in to the production, direction, and set design. While a few books were left unopened, the humanities got a workout.

"Before you begin, ah, would you uncross your legs and keep your feet firmly planted on the ground, twelve inches apart?"

"I'd just like . . ."

"Would you speak a little louder and a little slower, pronouncing the words if you could?"

"I'd just like to say . . ."

"Are you nervous? Your legs are shaking: just calm down and take it easy. Button your jacket if you would."

"Where's your eye contact? Come on, just look around the audience. I know you're nervous, but it's important."

"I'd just like to say that this is your best job of criticism yet. One hundred percent improvement, Mr. Navins."

Like any medicine, speech class can hurt going down. When they are speaking, Jon Imber has a headache, Dave Bergmann's tooth is bothering him, Bob Jaffe is nauseous, Andy Winneg has Parkinsons disease, Chan Gilman has burnt feet, Jack Cutler is seasick, Rick Welch is conversing, Larry Young is sermonizing, Fred Statler is wearing six guns, Pete Eshelman is ducked behind the podium, Mike O'Leary is flying, and Mr. Navins has to stomach all this castor oil. But however difficult speech class proved to be, the eighty seniors who made it through are sincerely grateful to Mr. Navins and wish to thank him for improving their confidence and poise, particularly when they can do so in writing.

School really ends before the week of commencement with the last test, the last paper, the last game, the last humanities event. Commencement week is simply the series of inextricable events which makes everything seem formal and final and which eventually leads to vacation. The Monday night rehearsal proved relatively unnecessary: the commencement march was later rained out. A vital new tradition was established with the Tuesday five mile handicap road race in which Howie Comis set a new course record. Tom Berntsen won the handicap race, and Mr. Wilkie received the greatest applause. Unfortunately, everyone was too sick to eat the pies until the next day. Wednesday saw the traditional senior dinner which included both good food and a worthwhile reminder by Mr. Wilkie that efforts for social and political reform must not exclude the search for happiness. On Thursday the athletic dinner and awards assembly were held. Commencement began in earnest on Friday and Mr. Witherspoon's skill became evident: the Morse flag was not rained out, we won both alumni games, the senior speakers at the dinner were considered by many to be the best in years, prizes were made, a truly amazing Oedipus Rex was presented free for students and parents, and the inevitable climb to the bell tower was made at least once. It rained hard on Saturday and the commencement exercises had to be held inside the gym: only the seniors got to march, more prizes were awarded, Bishop Cardigan's address on marriage was found truthful by the parents and interesting by the seniors, and diplomas were given to several incredulous boys.

JUNE

THE MORSE FLAG

THE MORSE FLAG was first awarded at the 150th Commencement of this school on June 9, 1913, and it has been awarded each year since that time to the senior whose record in all respects has met with the highest approval of the faculty. Today we look back on a year filled with an awesome collage of events and impressions, sights and sounds of anger and love, of despair and hope. In this world of war and human misery, of social and economic problems, of human triumph in technology and failure in human relations, many of us find ourselves confused, even shaken in confidence. We sense that our greatest need may well be the appearance of heads both able and level that will sort out the options and find the answers to complex issues.

My confidence springs anew from those around me and particularly the young man we honor this morning. A High Honor Roll student, member of Cum Laude, National Merit Scholarship Finalist, he also found time to serve as an extraordinary editor-in-chief of the Milestone, and to become an excellent distance runner in track and in cross country of which he was co-captain.

He possesses thoughtfulness, judgement, and a sense of responsibility par excellence, and it is for these reasons that I have confidence in a future that will be molded by the likes of him.

And so on behalf of the faculty it is my pleasure and privilege to present the Morse Flag.
Emery Robert Boose of Georgetown.

THE ACADEMY PRIZE

THE ACADEMY PRIZE is awarded to that senior who by his unselfishness and sportsmanship has best exemplified the spirit of the school.

As I said this morning at the Morse Flag ceremony, this has been a year of unusual tenions and concerns in the world, in the nations, and certainly on academic campuses. Governor Dummer has been no exception, and yet I believe we would agree that this community has reacted with an encouraging amount of thoughfulness, consideration, and restraint.

Much of the credit for the positive aspects of the year belongs to the President of the senior class. He has been tireless; he has been mature in judgement; he has been poised under pressure; and he has managed that rare feat of leading the school without losing contact with, or the faith of, his peers. His success springs from a combination of conviction, sensitivity, and persuasiveness.

I cannot imagine a student with whom I would rather have shared many of the problems of the year or in whom I could have had greater confidence.

On behalf of the faculty, it is my privilege and pleasure to present the Academy Prize.
Henry Boardman Eaton of Wellesley Hills.

AMBROSE PRIZE SPEAKING AWARDS

Increasingly ours is a world of oral communication. People in all fields of endeavor find themselves on their feet presenting ideas that often in the past appeared in written form. This being true, the experience our seniors gain in Mr. Navins's course in Speech becomes ever more important.

Last night at the Commencement dinner three members of his classes demonstrated the value of the course through their fine performances. This morning I am very pleased to present the Ambrose Prize Awards.

First: Michael Philip OLeary of Framingham
Second: Emery Robert Boose of Georgetown
Third: Jonathan Bruce Imber of Reading, Pennsylvania.

GOODWIN ATHLETIC PRIZE

The Goodwin Athletic Prize is given to the senior who, by athletic achievement and sportsmanship, has brought the greatest honor to his school during the past year. The prize goes to an extraordinary three-sport athlete whose quiet leadership and personal performances have given great strength to his teams and the athletic program as a whole. As a varsity football player, a string of 13 straight dual meet wrestling victories and two New England Prep School crowns to his credit, and co-captain of the varsity baseball team, he has been an outstanding example and inspiration for us all.

CUMINGS PRIZE

The Cumings Prize is awarded annually to a boy who has shown perseverance, hard work, and good spirit in his school life. Four years ago a young man entered the freshman class despite warnings from Mr. Witherspoon and me that he would probably have rough sledding. During that first fall, his housemaster came close to despairing over him. Tomorrow he graduates as a member of Cum Laude. In addition, he has been a highly successful dormitory proctor, two-sport varsity athlete, Business Manager of the "Governor," member of the band.
John Randall Whitney III of Concord.

GAFFNEY PRIZE

The Gaffney Prize is awarded to that senior who, in the opinion of his teachers, has been most considerate of the rights, opinions, and sensibilities of others. Today many of us shake our heads sadly at what seems to be the demise of civility and gentility and a rush toward personal abuse and vulgarity. The winner of this prize has been a refreshing contrast to this pattern in his ability to do a fine job as a dorm proctor, chairman of the Red Key and of library proctors, and varsity wrestler, while showing full courtesy and consideration for others in act and in word.
Martin Fernley Hillsgrove of Mystic, Connecticut.

BARRISKILL PRIZE

The James M. Barriskill Prize is awarded annually to that member of the senior class who has made an outstanding contribution in the field of music at the Academy. This seems to be a class containing an inordinate number of young men who possess an extraordinary range of talents. The winner of this prize has been a most conscientious honor student, a three-sport varsity athlete and co-captain and co-MVP in wrestling, fine dorm proctor, feature editor of the "Governor," and member of the Gourmet and Philosophy Clubs. But these he must have done in his spare time because we honor him tonight as our outstanding musician — an accomplished pianist, member of the Jazz ensemble, Chapel Choir librarian, member of and accompanist for the Glee Club.
William Banks Tobey of Ridgewood, New Jersey.

SPECIAL PRIZES

Through the generosity of Mr. Milton L. Dodge of Newburyport, we are able to present a group of Special Prizes to members of the senior class whose perseverance, courage, initiative, sense of responsibility, loyalty, or concern for others has contributed to the strength of the Academy.

(1)

The first special prize is awarded to a young man who has sought, and successfully carried out, many positions of responsibility. Undoubtedly the most conscientious and effective leader of social activities the school has ever known, he has also proved his leadership and organizational ability equally in his major role in such activities as the highly successful Ecology Day. In recognition of his willingness to assume responsibility and his seriousness of purpose, I am pleased to present this special Prize.

Joseph Edmund Bradley, 3rd of Wolfeboro, N.H.

I suspect we are all particularly impressed by young people who make great progress in the various aspects of their school lives. The winner of the second special prize has demonstrated just such progress in his academic performance, in his growth as an athlete leading to the captaincy of two varsity teams, and his emergence as the outstanding lead in the production of "Mister Roberts."

Francis Fessenden Chase, III of Norwell.

The third prize is awarded to a senior who has set very high goals for himself and through admirable spirit and determination has achieved them. In the process he has inspired many others through the impact of his character and devotion to his purpose. All of this has been demonstrated by his achievement of Honor-Roll standing, leading positions on three varsity teams, real contributions as a member of the Choir and the Band.

Christopher Charles Wyle of Cos Cob, Connecticut.

These are times in which we have great need for people with the courage of their own convictions and a determination to serve their fellows. This young man has been an outstanding leader of our dramatic program, an organizer and driving force behind student efforts to bring peace to the world, effective dormitory proctor, and even a volunteer substitute teacher when a faculty member was ill. He really deserves recognition for his many accomplishments.

Robert Lawrence Jaffe of Fall River.

If one of the purposes of a school like Governor Dummer is to encourage students to broaden their horizons and expand their areas of accomplishment, then we have succeeded admirably with this young man. During his years here, he has broadened his intellectual interests greatly and won election to Cum Laude; chairman of the study-hall proctors, sport editor of the "Governor," excellent distance runner, and co-captain of winter track, he has also been a charter member of the Gourmet Club. He has been an outstanding contributor to the life of the school.

Michael Philip O'Leary of Framingham.

The next special prize goes to a lad who comes from that same mold, for he too is a renaissance man. Not only has he been a strong student and outstanding athlete in soccer and track – of which he was co-captain both in winter and spring – he also has been president of both the Choir and the Glee Club, an excellent artist, and art editor of the "Spire." I doubt that life will ever be boring for him.

Ronald Brooks Latham of Chelmsford.

During recent months, we have all felt the strain of our times and it seemed difficult to find much cheer in the world. At GDA we have been very fortunate to have in our midst a young man whose ebullient spirit and ability to make the cheerful remark have made this a happier place for us all. In addition, he has shouldered great responsibility in running Mr. Witherspoon's tour team and as a leader of the program at the Hathorne School for Retarded Children and of the Chapel Committee. In the future I am sure he will continue to impress those around him and brighten their lives.

Nathaniel Emmons Williams of Dover.

The last special prize goes to a senior who has shouldered a great deal of leadership and responsibility during the year. As vice president of his class, editor of the "Governor," honor student, varsity wrestler, he has demonstrated his ability and his willingness to give his best in the interest of his community. He has been a source of great strength for the Academy.

Jonathan Bruce Imber of Reading, Pennsylvania.

HARVARD BOOK PRIZE

The Harvard Prize Book is awarded to that member of the junior class deemed most worthy through high scholarship and character. I take great pleasure in making this award on behalf of Roger Coulter to an outstanding junior, Honor Roll student, and two-sport varsity athlete.
Joseph Rocco LaPaglia, III of Byfield.

WHITTEMORE PRIZE

Whittemore Prize – presented by Henry Eaton, President of the Senior Class, to that member of the sophomore class who by his attitude and perseverance has made the best contribution to the Academy.
Timothy Oliver Traver of Barrington, Rhode Island.

INGHAM FUND SCHOLARSHIP

The Ingham Scholarship was established to help an industrious and able boy work his way through school. The winner joined us this past fall in the junior class and immediately set upon the difficult task of adjusting to new academic demands. Through conscientious effort, he has succeeded admirably. He also represented the school well on the J.V. soccer team and varsity basketball team, of which he is co-captain elect, and has provided strong leadership for the Black Brotherhood.
Gladstone Winston Smith of Atlanta, Georgia .

HALE SCHOLARSHIP

The Dean Channing Hale Scholarship is awarded to that student who, through his own perseverance, has shown the most improvement in the various aspects of school life and has become an esteemed contributor to the well being of the Governor Dummer community. Another member of the junior class who joined our ranks in September, this young man found the Academy program demanding and then suffered the disappointment of a season-long injury in football. Since then, he has shown just the sort of perseverance in his academic work and in varsity basketball and baseball that the Hales wished to honor.
William Franklin Litchfield of Wells, Maine.

FRANCIS SCHOLARSHIP

The Richard Hawes Francis Scholarship is awarded each year to an underclassman of high character who has made substantial intellectual progress and who has demonstrated a spirit of cooperation and helpfulness during his school life. It is always a pleasure to work with a young man who is conscientious and determined to take advantage of the opportunities placed before him. The recipient of this scholarship has been such a student and he has also served as a representative of his class, varsity football manager, and a member of our strong varsity basketball team.
Mario Rivera, Jr. of New York City.

COLMAN SCHOLARSHIP

The Edmund Coffin Scholarship is awarded to an undergraduate who has shown proficiency in the study of languages.
John Robbins Capron of New York City.

MOODY KENT PRIZES

The Moody Kent Prizes are given annually to those students throughout the school who have achieved outstanding records in various academic departments.

Paul Tucker Withington of Plymouth.

THORNDIKE HILTON CUP

The Thorndike Hilton Cup is awarded each year to the ranking scholar in the senior class. After doing a bit of research a few days ago, I wondered whether there has ever been so thoroughly qualified a winner of this cup. This young man was the ranking scholar of his class at the end of freshman year, sophomore year, junior year, and again this year. He has been a High Honor student throughout his career here, a member of Cum Laude, and a National Merit Finalist this year.
Emery Robert Boose of Georgetown.

EDITOR'S PRIZE

The Yearbook Achievement Award is given each year by the editor to that member of the Milestone organization whose efforts to the production of the book have been most outstanding.
Terry Euell Nolan of Birmingham, Alabama.

After the benediction we all stood for a moment, unsure of what we were supposed to do. It suddenly became evident that nothing else was supposed to be done, except to turn in caps and gowns. After an instinctive effort to leave through the exit door, we turned and began to disperse among the fragmented crowd. The gym was full of people one had always heard about but had never seen. It was nearly impossible to find anyone in particular, so each of us had to be satisfied with congratulating and meeting those people nearest to us. However, the gym was soon emptied: some of us were leaving already, others were going to the buffet lunch. At lunch we stood in line and later sat eating, continuing the process of meeting and congratulating and saying goodby and smoking cigars and looking at the girls. The remaining boys then turned to the task of emptying the dorms. The corridors were all full of old trunks and luggage, and the parents and sisters seemed incongruous in the familiar rooms. Finally we walked around campus in the rain to see others for the last time. And then, happily, sadly, indifferently, insensitively, feelingly, we left.
